

Mingothings started in 2016 as a project to offer our expertise in developing Spanish businesses internationally. During this time, we had the opportunity to expand our services to not only cover business development but also engineering. This expansion led us to become a technology systems integrator. Since then, we have expanded our team to provide new services to our clients.

In that same year, Diprotech was founded, a technology company focused on developing hardware, firmware, and software projects, as well as providing consulting services and advice on engineering, product development, and production. Since its inception, Diprotech has been distinguished by its innovative approach and its ability to offer cutting-edge technological solutions to its clients. Over the years, the company has demonstrated a solid track record of success in executing complex projects and satisfying customers.

The relationship between Diprotech and Mingothings has strengthened greatly over time, to the point where our organizational charts have become intertwined. This close collaboration has been a key component in the success of both companies.

At Mingothings, we have developed a comprehensive understanding of customer requirements in the technology sector. Our ability to quickly adapt to market trends allows us to tackle a wide range of projects. Today, we are internationally recognized with clients worldwide. Each client brings unique demands, and we strive to meet them.

From Diprotech, we share the same vision of excellence in service and quality. Our partnership with Mingothings has been essential to our growth and development. We are committed to continuing to collaborate closely to provide high-quality services to our clients.

The values of Collaboration, Adaptability, Global Outlook, Commitment to Quality, Customer Centricity and Excellence are deeply ingrained in our organizations, and each employee is committed to upholding these principles to ensure exceptional service.

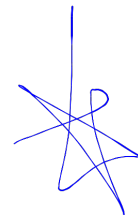

As CEOs of Mingothings and Diprotech, we are committed to facilitating and supporting the implementation of a common Quality Management System based on ISO 9001. This system aims to formalize the quality-driven culture that we want to instill throughout our entire business, including our employees and partners. We recognize the importance of partnerships, and one of the most valuable is the one we have between our two companies.

Signed:

Xavier Carné
CEO of Diprotechnologies SL

Signed:

Francesc Domingo
CEO of Mingothings SLU